Panel Organizer Guidelines

Deadline for Abstracts/Papers and Early Registration: March 15, 2025

OVERALL RESPONSIBILITY:

As panel organizer, you have the principal responsibility for your panel. Your job includes monitoring preparations of your panel's participants and maintaining liaison between them and B&ESI. Be sure (1) your panel maintains high professional standards; (2) you and your panel participants are well prepared and strictly observe all deadlines. Finally, you are responsible to see that all registration fees are paid by those within your panel. The fee for each participant on the panel, except the organizer, is $420 ($470 after April 30, 2025). The fee for the panel organizer is $200 ($250 after April 30, 2025).

SUGGESTED PANEL FORMAT:

Chairperson, three papers presented by respective authors, two to four discussants, with at least one discussant assigned to comment on each paper. (Other formats, such as moderator and panelists or workshops, also might be used.)

SELECTION OF PARTICIPANTS:

This is your most important job because the quality of your panel depends principally on its participants. A mix of young scholars with new ideas and older, more seasoned researchers can be conducive to a mutually advantageous exchange. Also, try to include both academics and non-academics among your panel's program participants.

CONFERENCE SESSION TIME ALLOCATION:

One hour, 30 minutes.

DEADLINE:

Complete panel/workshop information must be received by March 15, 2025. After that date, sessions will be accepted only on a space available basis.

CONFERENCE FORMAT:

The conference format is intended to foster active involvement by all attendees. Most of those attending are on the program; and, except for a few general sessions, the program consists of small discussion groups meeting concurrently. Including program participants, attendance at a typical panel may range from 10 to 50, depending on the topic's popularity and the participants' prominence. You and the other participants in your panel might benefit from inviting people to attend your panel. However, the most fruitful discussions often occur when only a small group of interested individuals is involved. To avoid unrealistic expectations, advise prospective participants in advance regarding the program format and the typical size of panel attendance.

INFORMATION NEEDED BY B&ESI: (See sample below)

After receiving commitments from panel participants, send us the following: (1) Suggested panel title; (2) Category (see "Subject Categories" below); (3) Professional affiliations, paper titles, mailing addresses (and if available e-mail addresses), phone, and fax numbers for the chair, paper presenters, co-authors, and discussants.

SESSION SCHEDULING REQUESTS:

When establishing the conference panel schedule, we face numerous constraints, such as minimizing conflicts between topics and making sure no one is scheduled in two panels at the same time. If extenuating circumstances will allow one of your participants to attend only on a specific day or time, note these constraints at the top of your panel information. All scheduling requests must be received in writing by March 15, 2025. Making adjustments after panels have scheduled is virtually impossible.
